Excitement Grows for New Clinical Model

see pg 6

From the Dean

As we embark upon a new academic year, we are excited for the change in our approach to clinical education. After 1½ years of exploring other models and incorporating our strengths, we have developed, and now launched, a group practice comprehensive care delivery model. Not only will this provide an enhanced educational experience for our students, but it also will provide a better patient experience, and lead to greater satisfaction for faculty and staff.

Drs. Jim Jenkins, Joan Sivers and Tim Durham led the committee comprised of faculty, staff and students to arrive at our new model. The model also has resulted in a need for organizational restructuring. On the cover you will see the faculty who interviewed for and were selected to take the lead as mentors in the group model, as well as an implant care director and a group administrator. Staff position descriptions also have changed and a number of staff reassignments have resulted as a part of this change. Our faculty and staff have worked tirelessly over the summer preparing for the launch!

We recognize that the model will continue to evolve. Built into the clinic schedule is time for reflection and reevaluation of the model as well as continual calibration. Ultimately, we anticipate full integration of our dental and dental hygiene students working collaboratively to better simulate a private practice model. In addition, we expect to incorporate additional practice management principles into the groups to enhance our students' knowledge of managing a practice and efficiencies of care.

With the new year comes additional change - we welcome Mr. Brook Jobes as the new director of development for the UNMC College of Dentistry (see story pg. 7). Brook comes from a long lineage of College of Dentistry graduates, so he is familiar with dentistry and the many strengths of the college. Please do not hesitate to call or email Brook (402-458-1183 or brook.jobes@unmc.edu). He would love the opportunity to hear your individual experiences as a graduate or friend of the college.

Finally, we hope to see you at the Homecoming festivities on Sept. 8-10! It will be a very special homecoming for our Dental Hygiene program, which is celebrating 50 years! Please join us!

“Serving in this leadership position allowed me to work with students from schools all over the nation, as well as faculty, to enhance dental education and research.”

Erica Jasa, D.D.S.

Lessons in Leadership

Reflecting back on her year of service on the board of directors for the American Dental Education Association (ADEA), Erica Jasa, D.D.S., is grateful for the opportunity given to her.

“As a member of the board, I was a voice for my classmates and dental students across the country,” said Dr. Jasa, who graduated in May from the UNMC College of Dentistry.

Dr. Jasa spent the past year of her dental education serving on the ADEA board of directors to represent the Council of Students, Residents and Fellows. Currently, she is studying periodontics during her residency at the UNMC College of Dentistry.

Dr. Jasa served on review committees and the student financial aid committee, as well as helped plan the two national meetings ADEA holds every year.

Her position, Dr. Jasa said, required her to attend four board meetings a year at the ADEA headquarters in Washington, D.C., but she also had monthly conference calls with the board of directors as well as separate monthly conference calls with the student council.

“It was definitely a busy schedule, one in which I had to learn to manage my time wisely so I would also meet the demands of my final year in dental school, but something that I know only strengthened me professionally,” Dr. Jasa said.

While on the student financial aid committee, Dr. Jasa had the opportunity to look at the rising cost of dental education and how students are handling it. She also served on review committees that looked at the ADEA organization as a whole and how it can stay abreast of changes in dentistry.

“Serving in this leadership position allowed me to work with students from schools all over the nation, as well as faculty, to enhance dental education and research,” she said. “It also helped me to grow personally and professionally in ways that I will use throughout my career as I continue to advocate for the profession.”

“You Can Never Go Wrong Doing the Right Thing” NU President Hank Bounds Tells Students

The strength of a person’s moral fiber and integrity can’t be measured.

“But you know when it exists and when it doesn’t,” Hank Bounds, Ph.D., told faculty, staff and students at the UNMC College of Dentistry’s 30th annual Professionals Day event on April 1.

The seventh president of the University of Nebraska, Dr. Bounds began his tenure in April 2015, coming to Nebraska from Mississippi where he served as a high school teacher, principal, superintendent, state superintendent and finally the state’s commissioner of higher education.

Over the course of his 25-year career, the most important lessons he learned about character came during the most trying circumstances. Of those life lessons, Dr. Bounds said, there are five that stand out.

- The choices you make will determine the life you lead — you can never go wrong by doing the right thing.

- Help is not on the way — there will be challenges in life and you will have to help yourself.
- There is always a silver lining to every storm — prepare for the storms of life and figure out how to find the silver lining to every situation you encounter.
- Sometimes you have to break the rules — know what the right thing to do is and do it.
- Identify the main thing in your life and keep the main thing the main thing — all too often we get too focused on everything else but the main thing. When that happens, refocus yourself.

Those lessons, he said, were learned during the immediate aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, the deadliest hurricane to ever hit the United States. Katrina struck southeast Louisiana and southern Mississippi on Aug. 29, 2005, causing $108 billion in damage, killing 1,833 people and leaving millions homeless along the Gulf Coast.

Many of the people affected included more than 700,000 school children in districts lining southern Mississippi. And, Dr. Bounds was just 30 days into his new job as the state superintendent.

“In the midst of that phenomenal destruction I saw unbelievable courage and displays of character that stay with me to this day,” Dr. Bounds said.

Crisis doesn’t build character, he said, but often reveals it.

Health care professionals must be men and women of character, he told the students, who don’t take shortcuts, do everything to the best of their ability and meet their obligations.

“You are going to face crisis and you are going to have to make decisions,” Dr. Bounds said. “Just remember — always be kind, be hopeful, be happy — how you think determines how you feel and how you feel determines how you behave toward yourself and others.”

New School Year Brings New Clinical Model

A new clinical model is being introduced this fall at the UNMC College of Dentistry, one that faculty, staff and students say will provide an enhanced curriculum and continuum of care for patients.

In March 2015, a committee of 17 faculty members, staff and students was charged with reviewing the college's clinical curriculum and exploring ways to enhance the educational experience for students, meanwhile providing patients with a patient-centered comprehensive care experience. The committee, led by Jim Jenkins, D.D.S., and co-led by Tim Durham, D.D.S., and Joan Sivers, D.D.S., spent many months evaluating the current model and the clinical curriculums at several dental schools across the United States.

"It was time for a change," said Dr. Jenkins, assistant dean at the College of Dentistry. "While we have always been successfully accredited, we are continually looking for ways to improve."

In this new model, upper level dental and dental hygiene students will be assigned to a clinical team. Each team will have a faculty group leader and an associate leader who will be with the students each time they are in clinic, providing supervision and mentorship. Specialists in periodontics and prosthodontics and other restorative dentists will support each of the groups. Faculty in other clinical disciplines (endodontics, oral pathology and oral medicine, oral surgery and orthodontics) will be available for consultation. "We felt the need to improve upon the patient experience and develop greater continuity of care through a generalist-centered model," said Dr. Durham, assistant dean for patient services. "This moves us in that direction."

Staff positions including a group practice coordinator and appointment clerk will support each group and act as liaisons with the patients and the students and faculty.

"Dental and dental hygiene students will encounter a new clinical model this fall that closely resembles a private practice," said Dr. Jenkins, adding that this will give students valuable experience they can use upon graduation. In their groups, students will manage a family of patients, assessing and diagnosing their patients' needs and providing comprehensive care to the patients. Referrals for advanced therapy will be utilized as needed.

Ultimately, the group practices will incorporate dental students and dental hygiene students working in tandem. It will be an example of intraprofessional education whereby students will learn from all faculty.

"We have strong faculty from a variety of work experiences – private and corporate practice, and even one who has practiced at a federally qualified health center – who I believe will enrich the education of all the students," said Dr. Sivers, assistant dean of clinics at the College of Dentistry.

"It's a big change but one that will give the students the feel of working in a private practice," said Julie Heyl, clinical services manager at the College of Dentistry. "And our patients, hopefully, will feel like they have a dental home."

"I can see the excitement mounting," Dr. Sivers said. "We've been working on this for a year-and-a-half and expect the impact on the student's education, and the patient's care, to be significant."

Brook Jobes joins NU Foundation as UNMC College of Dentistry Liaison

The newest director of development for the University of Nebraska Foundation and newly appointed liaison to the UNMC College of Dentistry has numerous ties to the dental school.

In fact, Brook Jobes has a 100-year connection to the College of Dentistry, including 10 dentists in his family who have graduated from the college dating back to the class of 1916.

"It makes me proud to be a part of the team supporting the College of Dentistry and while I may not be a dentist, I know I can be an ambassador with my extensive history and enthusiasm for the college and its mission," Jobes said.

As liaison, Jobes' primary responsibility is to connect donors' interests and passions to the needs and priorities of the College of Dentistry.

He previously worked in recruiting and operations for the University of Nebraska and University of Oklahoma football programs, where he worked with potential student recruits and their families, building rapport, showing them around the campus and introducing them to the brand and philosophy of each school.

Most recently, Jobes worked at National Research Corporation as a business development manager collaborating with health care executives across the country to improve patient care.

"We are delighted to welcome Brook Jobes as the new director of development for the College of Dentistry," said Dean Janet Guthmiller, D.D.S., Ph.D. "I look forward to introducing Brook to our collegiate community and many graduates and friends of the college. He brings a unique skill set and great appreciation for the importance of oral health."

"I definitely bring a different perspective filled with an appreciation for the changing health care landscape, as well as the passions and goals each of us as individuals have," he said. "I'm excited to meet with the distinguished and dedicated alumni, as well as friends and supporters, to hear what they're passionate about when it comes to the College of Dentistry."

Dental Hygiene Graduates Take First Place at ADHA Annual Meeting

Erica Spanyers and Laura Shaw, 2016 dental hygiene graduates, received first place honors June 9 at the annual American Dental Hygienists' Association meeting in Pittsburg, Pa., for their student research poster that compared the sharpening efficiency of tooth scalers using a ceramic stone vs. a diamond-plated stone.

"Laura and I chose this as our research project because the diamond-plated sharpening cards were newly purchased for the junior class and we were interested to see if those were superior to what we used at the time, which were the ceramic stones," Shaw said.

Their research, titled "A Study Comparing Sharpening Efficiency and Metal Removal Using Diamond-Plated Compared to Ceramic Stones," was funded by a $750 summer research grant from the College of Dentistry. As first place winners in the national competition, they received a $1,000 stipend and UNMC's Dental Hygiene Department also received $1,000. The students asked that the department award go to the 50th Anniversary Dental Hygiene Endowment.

"We wanted to support the endowment fund in recognition of the outstanding faculty," Spanyers said. "Erica and I would not be where we are today without their dedication and support."

Jeffrey Payne, D.D.S., M.Dent.Sc., a professor in the department of surgical specialties, was their primary mentor and Mark Beatty, D.D.S., a professor in the department of adult restorative dentistry, along with Heather Hessheimer, an assistant professor, in the department of dental hygiene, served as co-mentors.

Want to get involved?

“There are many ways alumni can become engaged, besides the incredible financial support our alums have provided over the years,” said Janet Guthmiller, D.D.S., Ph.D., dean, UNMC College of Dentistry.

This includes:

- Providing lectures on clinical techniques and practice management;
- Teaching in the clinics;
- Mentoring current students and new graduates on practice management and practice opportunities;
- Inviting students and new graduates to local study clubs and organized dentistry opportunities;
- Getting involved in COD Alumni Association Activities;
- Volunteering at outreach events such as the SHARING Dental Clinic, Children’s Dental Day and other events; and
- Serving as preceptors for students in their practices.

Alumni interested in exploring such opportunities should contact the UNMC College of Dentistry Dean’s office.

Engaged Alum: Dr. Matthew Coon

Matthew Coon, D.D.S., ('08) enjoys being an engaged alum of the College of Dentistry. When opportunities arise to volunteer, he does so eagerly.

“I have always enjoyed working with Dr. Coon,” said David G. Brown, Ph.D., executive associate dean. “He has gone the extra mile to be engaged in serving the public, for dentistry and for the UNMC College of Dentistry.”

He recently went about 55 miles – from Gering to Alliance – to donate a day off, supervising College of Dentistry students who volunteered to serve at a Panhandle Dental Day.

Dental hygiene students provided cleanings, and dental students provided fillings and routine preventive care for kids who have little to no access to dental care.

Dr. Coon enjoyed the enthusiasm of the kids – and the students, who in addition to practicing their skills, get to see the importance of serving their community.

That type of service is part of what Dr. Coon enjoys about his day job -- as a staff dentist with the College of Dentistry, at the Community Action Partnership of Western Nebraska (CAPWN) in Gering, Neb.

“We provide a service that’s needed,” he said. “It’s community health, serving folks who couldn’t get services elsewhere. It’s fulfilling that way.”

In addition, the job at CAPWN allows Dr. Coon the opportunity to help out and volunteer with other service efforts through the College of Dentistry.

The college considers Dr. Coon practicing in rural Nebraska part of that service.

“The college has been committed to serving the public of Nebraska and all across the state not just Lincoln,” Dr. Brown said. “Dr. Coon has accepted this challenge.”

But Dr. Coon doesn’t necessarily see it that way. At least not entirely.

He grew up in Bayard, Neb., and western Nebraska is home. It was perfect for him. He was grateful to be able to come back to the Panhandle to further his career.

Maybe the same can happen for a few of the College of Dentistry students he mentors.

Dr. Coon serves as a faculty preceptor for UNMC dental and dental hygiene students at CAPWN in Gering.

“I came out to the exact same place for my rotation when I was in school,” he said. He sees himself in these students. “I know how excited they are.”

They relish the hands-on experience. And he helps mentor the next wave of COD professionals who will go on to serve the state. Perhaps some of them will come back to the western part of the state, to also serve in public health.

Dr. Coon said UNMC dentistry alums in the region keep in touch with one another.

“We’re all very proud to have graduated from the UNMC College of Dentistry,” he said. “It’s a great school.”

An Invitation to Support the Dental Hygiene 50th Anniversary Endowment

To mark the 50th anniversary of the Dental Hygiene Department, the Class of '66, the very first class to graduate, began a fundraising effort to establish the Dental Hygiene Department 50th Anniversary Endowment Fund.

The goals of the new endowed fund are to provide a fellowship for faculty in the dental hygiene department, with surplus for the department’s other priority needs. Ultimately, if the fund reaches $250,000, it would endow the first full faculty professorship in dental hygiene at the UNMC College of Dentistry. So far, contributions from alumni and friends of the dental hygiene program exceed $60,000.

To all of the alums of the College of Dentistry, please join in supporting and recognizing the Department of Dental Hygiene through a gift to this fund.

All gifts matter and will continue to support the tradition of excellence set forth by the Department of Dental Hygiene for the past 50 years and into the future!

If you are interested in making a gift to this fund, visit nufoundation.org/dentalthygiene50th, or call Brook Jobes, director of development, University of Nebraska Foundation at 402-458-1183. Your giving matters – make your gift today!

Dental Hygiene Snapshot: The 1980s and 90s

As the 50th anniversary celebration of the College of Dentistry's Dental Hygiene program draws near, faculty and alum share memories of events that occurred in the 1980s and 1990s.

Some of those collective memories include events that literally changed the look of the dental hygiene clinic when it was remodeled in the 1980s, to the introduction of the Dental Hygiene West Division Program through the use of distance education in the late 1990s.

"I'll never forget the time I had a patient who was snoring loudly during clinic," recalled Cindy Buresh (Meyer), who graduated in 1985. "Since my chair was near the aisle, several dental students poked their heads in to see what the noise was. I just kept on working, because my patient slept with her mouth open!"

Other events that occurred in the 1980s and 1990s:

- Dental hygiene clinic was remodeled in the 1980s,
 - Including the introduction of carpet and caramel-colored naughahyde on the dental chairs;
- Connie Tussing was elected president of the American Dental Hygienists' Association in 1983;
- Gwen Hlava became the director of the program in 1985;
