Session Title: How Inequities Impact the Health of Our Communities: A National Perspective
Featuring: CityMatCH

Session Layout:

During this time CityMatCH will answer who we are, what we do, and why it is important to the well-being of our nation. They will also discuss a few of their projects and keys to making an impact

Session Description:

Let's play a game! Find the common thread in the following words: Birth, Racism, System. Stumped?

All the more reason why you should attend this session where we will discuss how inequities impact the health of our communities and create disparities. CityMatCH is a national Maternal and Child Health organization, located right here at UNMC, dedicated to addressing these disparities. Join us to learn more about CityMatCH and engage in a dynamic conversation on inequities in our communities, how they impact health outcomes, and what we are doing to make change.

Light refreshments served

Fearless: How a poor Virginia seamstress took on Jim Crow, beat the poll tax and changed her city forever Meet, and hear from local author, Charlene Butts Ligon. While Norfolk, Virginia, and its environs are the backdrop for the story of Evelyn Butts life and activism, there are lessons that can apply to many communities and readers of all ages. There are always new obstacles, even in voting rights. The poll tax was an important part of American history that should not be forgotten. We must stay vigilant about continued attempts at voter suppression, which keeps coming back in new forms. Books will be available at a discounted rate.
