Rehab for the Non-Rehabilitation Professional

Lead Faculty: Rebecca Wester MD

An accident, major surgery or extended hospitalization can happen to anyone. Regardless of cause, anyone can lose the ability to care for oneself. Rehabilitation is the process to regain independence.

This seminar is designed to give students practical working knowledge about rehabilitative care and its best practices. Students will be asked to read the assigned readings prior to the small group sessions. It includes a tour of rehabilitation facilities.

Objectives:
Knowledge:
1. Discuss the nuts and bolts of the rehabilitation referral process: The who, what, where, when and how.
2. Compare and contrast the types of rehabilitation facilities.

Attitude:
3. Value the importance of the interdisciplinary team (IDT) approach as best practice.

Skills:
4. Practice as IDT team members to address patient’s typical road blocks to successfully regaining independence.
